At the Chromo about thirty tons of very rich ore are out, five assays giving an average of $800. This is from the rich pay-streak 16 to 20 inches in width. This property is now admirably opened, so ithat ore can be rapidly taken out. The main shaft is 60 feet in depth and a tunnel of 448 feet has been run.

Mr. W. B. Hellings evidently means business at the Centennial. The company, who have recently acquired this and five other properties within a radius of one-half mile, are going to work systematically, and give proof of having that all essential motor, c in, necessary for the successful accomplishment of legitimate mining undertakings. Supplies are now en route for the camp, and arrangements are on foot for the erection of needful buildings. Forty or fifty miners will soon be employed, and as soon as, in the estimation of Superintendent Hellings, sufficient work has been done on the Centennial to establish the extent and value of the ledge, other claims will be taken hold of.

[From the New York World.] The appearance in any of the principal saloons of a candidate for a county office is, any time in the evening, the signal for a general rush to the bar. The daring candidate may peep in at the door and see only one man present besides the barkceper. He goes in to treat the man, when, lo the saloon instantly becomes full of men. They drop in at the front door, they enter from the side, they come forward from the rear, up out of the cellar and swarm down the stairs. They all slap the candidate on the back in turn and inquire how he's doing. Then the shout goes up: "Who's a-treatin'?" A desperate smile flits over the candidate's facelike a gleam of sunshine on a wintry landscape—and he says: "Boys, what're ye goin' to have?" Then the " Boys "boys" fall into line before the bartwo or three dozen of them-and when all the glasses are charged there's a half-drowned murmur of "Ere's to ye," and the candidate rushes wildly out into the night.
